

Men, Isn't Clothes Satisfaction What You're Looking For?

There is no doubt in the world but that it is. It's our iron clad rule to satisfy our customers in every respect. We must see that you are pleased with your purchase, or else we are willing and rather lose a sale than have you buy that which will not serve you.

First of all we desire to call your attention to the style and fit of our clothes. We can assure you that these important features will be admired—the style up to the minute, and the fit equal to tailor made.

Then comes the material and workmanship. This is where Service comes in. The best materials and tailoring skill are put into our garments.

Talk about colors and patterns, why we have them in such a large variety that any man's whims can be pleased.

These features combined help to make a value that you must pay from $5 to $10 more elsewhere.

So you see it's no wonder why we have the cream of the trade, when we offer such remarkable values for

HIT SCORED

By the Play Given in the Mt. Zion Colored Baptist Church.

The play "Home Ties," which was given at the Mt. Zion Baptist church, colored, last evening, under the auspices of the Ladies' Sewing Circle, was enjoyed by everyone who witnessed it, and was claimed to be one of the best plays that has ever been given at that church.

Frances Jordan & Ruth Winn, and Frank L. Hicks as Len Everett scored quite a hit, as did also Russell H. Scott as Ruth's father. Sheldon Jordan as Josiah Tizzard and Mrs. Lucy Grant as Mrs. Poplin certainly had the comedy end of the play, and it must be said that they all played fine.

TO VOTE.

The question of having a high school at West Milford will be submitted to the voters of Union district June 24. It is an important question and every voter should go to the polls.

militia. General Elliott said that he knew that Representative S. B. Avis, former county prosecutor, had told Governor Glasscock that he could not obtain action in the court to subdue the riotous conditions. This, he said, was one of the reasons the governor declared martial law. The witness said that his troops had captured five or six machine guns in the affected territory.

General Elliott told of the operations of an armored train on which a machine gun was mounted. The train made four trips up Paint and Cabin creeks. He could not say who manned this train, which among the miners was known as "the Bull Moose special."

Asks About Guns.

Attorney Belcher tried to ascertain whether rifles were carried on a special train that invaded the Paint Creek section the night of February 7 and from which a battle was fought at Holly Grove. General Elliott did not know where the guns came from but this he would try to find out.

After the first martial law period, General Elliott said, members of the state militia, officers and men were employed by the coal operators to act as watchmen for mine guards. They remained as guards, he said, even after martial law again was declared and the troops again took charge of the field.

Armed Miners Parade.

On cross examination by Attorney Knight for the operators, General Elliott said he had been informed that just prior to the first martial law declaration parties of armed miners were parading up and down Paint creek. He had been informed that two watchmen, Stringer and Phautt, were shot from ambush. Stringer was killed and Phautt badly wounded. A party of guards was endeavoring to recover Stringer's body, he had been informed, and had been driven back by rifle fire. This was July 25, 1912.

The next day an attack on the village of Mucklow had been made by several bodies of men firing from the hills about the town. Reports to General Elliott have showed that a miner named Gus Pinson, who was with a rescue party that went to the relief of Mucklow was killed. It was immediately after the battle of Mucklow that troops were sent into the Paint Creek field.

General Elliott said that the declaration of martial law was urged by the strikers and the United Mine Workers' officials while the coal operators protested both to him and to the governor against the issuing of the proclamation.
